THE CHINA FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.

Au extraordinary general meeting of th boys Company was held at the offices. Queen Rold Control yesterday. There were present Messes, H. L. Dulrymple (Chairman), A. G Wood, A. McConachie, D. R. Sassonn (Directors: J. H. Cox. A. Ros. A. B. Johnson, C. A. Daorio, L. C. Rozario, J. H. Lowis, D.

Silvs. Wei A Yuk, J. Thurbarn, J. D. Mouro, and J. S. Coughtrie (Secretary). The CHAIRMAN said -Gentlemen, the object for which this meeting is cilled having been discussed and approved by the shareholders at the ordinary appual meeting held on the 22nd February last, it is not necessary that I should say more than a few words on this occasion. The resolution as it will be put to you has been advertised in the papers since the 8th April, and has just now been rold, as I may presume you are all sufficiently oware of it. The solual additions to the first sub-section of the article the powers of investment by the Board of Directors are contained in very few words, but they cover a great deal of ground erhaps more than would have been considered isossary had experience not shown that circumstances change so materially in the course of line that It is wiser to endow your directors with very full powers and then see that they are exercised with discretion. The same article with which we are now dealing was on a provious occasion the subject of alteration, and there were then some shareholders, who rather objected to give their directors as much power as would enable them to invest the Company's funds in Chilese Government loans, with which we afterwards did and are still doing, so well. main reason for our asking now for further scope or the employment of a portion of the Comany stands is as you have proviously become ormed, that we were unable on occasions to take advantage of the issue of certain debenare bonds that seemed to afford a safe and proitable form of investment. For several reasons t seemed desirable to the Board that this dis bility should be removed and we enticipate go objection to the resolution I shall propose ecouse not only has it been carefully drawn up w the Company's solicitors in accordance wit the most modern examples, but it is identica a effect with the powers conferred apon the lirectors of such local companies as the Hong. cong Fire, the Straits Fire, the China Traders. the Steamboat Company, and probably many others. I now propose :- That the first sub section of article 103 of the articles of association of The China Fire Insurance Company imited, with its marginal note, by expanged ind that in lieu thereof the following sub-secion and marginal note be insirted. viz: -I may invest the funds of the Company in or apon Euglish. property of a member or members, and no one but a member can ride in any race. Under these oirvamstances it seems to me impossible to say Mr. J. ORANGE-There will be a meeting | that the only misconduct of a member which could injuriously affect the Club would be misconduct in connection with horse racing. It is not difficult to imagine other missonduct on the part of a member which would make his participation in the sport whether as owner or rider highly and reasonably objectionable to other mambers. In Dawkins v. Antrohus L.R. 17 CheD. 615 a new rule provided that in one the conduct of a member should be injurious to the character and interests of the Club (The Trivellers) certain stops might be taken for his expalsion. It was held that this rule was not ultra virce and that even if the decision to expel wore upreasonable the Court would not interfere if the discretion to expel had been exercised bond fide. There, as here, the new rule had been add d after the p'diatiff's membership commenced and was made under an implied power to add to he rules. There indeed the conduct of the expelled member had taken place after the rule had passed but this does not concern the point under present consideration. The case in an authority to this extent, that when there is a power to add to the rules of a Club a new departure may be taken as to grounds of expulsion f the interests of the Club require it. If it is edt obiste that the conduct of a member outside the Club might be injurious to the interests of the lab, the validity of a rule providing for expulsion for such conduct would not be affected by the Club being a sporting instead of a social one. I've difference, if any, would be only in the application of the rule. Conduct which would no-essarily injure a purely social Club might not lajare a sperting Club. This would be a matter for the discretion of the expelling authority and this discretion cannot, as the case quoted shows, be controlled by a Coart of law. The next contention of the plaintiff which I deal with is the augrestion that the proceedings under which he was expelled were not in accordince with rule 32 which runs as follows; - " Every resulution passed at an extraordinary general meeting must be confirmed by a majority imounting to two-thirds of the votes at a second extraordinary general meeting to be held 4 days subsequent to the conclusion of the first, and during that time the resolution or resoluions shall be circulated for the information of numbers who may not have attended at the first meeting, and may wish to vote at the subequeut one." There being no erid nos of consont to or condonation of any arragin arity. I agree that the plaintiff has a right to in list upon a strict observance of the conditions of this rule. The question is whether the meeting at which the resolution for expulsion was confirmed, held as it was on the 15th day after the meeting at which the resolution was presed, was hald in recordbecome at serioger dollar elur edt dis sone median to be held 14 days sebs quent to the conclusion of the first. If these words stood tions, the second meeting would, I think, have to be held on the 14th day; but the rule goes on to provide that "during that time the resoluion shall be circulated." I think that this means that 14 days must be allowed for the cirsulation of the resolution; and this could not ba done if the second meeting were held before the 15th day. In Young against Higgins, 6. M. & W. 49. Alderson (B.) said, Where there is given to a party certain space of time to do some act, which space of time is included between two other sets to be done by inother person, both the days of doing those role ought to be expluded, in order to ensure to him the whole of that space of time." This rule was duoted and asted upon in the recent case of the Radway Sleepers Supply Company, L. R. 29 Ch. D. 204, and I think it governs this point. There were here two extraordinary general meetings of members to be held, and between these two meetings 14 days are allotted to the Stewards for the circulation of the result of the first meeting. I think they were right in setting apart the whole of the 14 days for that purpose. There was a point suggested by the defendants, but not seriously argued, namely, that the conviction of a member for an indictable offence should ipso fixeto dissolve the contract of membership. A passage was cited from a text book relating to clubs (Wortholmer on Clubs, p. 91) which referred to the analogy of the Law of Corporations in support of the position that a member may be expelled from a club without further enquiry on his conviction of a crime. It is quite clear, however, from the context that the passage was meant to apply to clubs having in force at the time of the conviction the ordinary rule for the expulsion of a member whose conduct is injurious to the cinb. The power of a corporation to disfranchise a corporator upon his conviction of a crime would not otherwise furnish any analogy, as the power is based anthority nor reason to show that the plaintiff's vacant chairs downstalrs and whether it was the set in June 1891; and sone of these reports appeared for the plaintiff; the defendants were proprietary rights. to the right to a certificate under the Act: This is therefore not an instance of the retrospective eperation of a Statute in the souse of its destroying or modifying a pre-existing right. In exparts In Patients remaining in Hespital on Dawson, L R. 19 Eq. 433 (also pited by the defendants) section 91 of the Bankruptey Act. 369, which declared that certain settlements wore void, was held to apply to settlements made before the passing of the Act; but there again no right was interfered with, because, as pointed out in the judgment, such settlements had been also void under a section of the previous Bankruptey Act, for which section 91 was an battleted. There are, however. cases where statutes, especially such as deal with the practice and procedure of courts of justice, have been held to relate back so as to modify the position of parties before the statutes passed. It is true that generally such statutes have contained provisions which mitigated the effect of the ex post facts operation, but even in the absence of such provisions the clear intention of the law must be followed. In Abell against Lee, L.R. 6 C.P. 371, Willes (J.) said, "I utterly repudiate the notion that it is competent to a judge to medify the language of an Act of Parliament in order to bring it in accordance with his views as to what is right and reasonable," and this principle has been recognised in numerous cases. All that can be said for the presumption against the retrospective operation of a Statute is that the Courtswill not allow such an operation to destroy vested rights or projudicially affect the legal lable of tate. A large proportion of the quantity character of past acts, unless the language of the is for restocking the government graneries, the Act makes it quite clear that such operation was old reserves having been disposed of to dealers intended. The whole of the statute in which it was con- native banks, and they are becoming so dis-

examined with a view to ascertain its meming. In the second place, the powers of a club to make new rules are altogether different from those of a legislature. A logislature, unless its powers are limited by the way in which it was created, has an inherent power to pass laws evon to the destruction of vasted rights. It is its own judge of what is just and unjust; but the powers of a club are limited by the contract (as contained in the roles) which every member makes on entry. If there is a power reserved to alter the rule: the nentract is altered as the rules are, altered, but not before. Furning to the language of rule 40, "If the Stewards, &c., shall be of opinion that the conduct of a member has been injurious. ko., I think that the literal meaning embraces tai will, in addition to his own appointment. all past conduct, though as regards the injury which results from the conduct I hardly see how the meaning could include a past injury which is not also a present one. On the other hand, it. is. I think, clear that the whole of the rule can also be applied to future conduct. The event upon which the application of the rule hinges is a future one. It is the opinion which shall be formed by the stowards, &c. rule refers to past conduct at the time of enquiry, not to past conduct at the date of the rule; and past conduct at the time of enquiry may be conduct subsequent to the passing of the rule. If the rule instead of providing for an enquiry at a future date merely ran. "If the conduct of a mumber has been injurious, &c. simply a means of expelling those who, without having broken any of the Club rules, or rendered themselves previously liable to expulsion, had, for some reason or other, become obnoxions to a majority of the members. Buch a rule would. I think, be ultra vires. In Dawkins v. Autrobus, the Master of the Rolls, in discussing whether the rale under which the plaintiff was expelled was binding upon him as a member of the clab, said-" Now, that does, not depand on the inherent power of a club to pass a rule to expel one or more of its members. I for one am unaware of the existence of such a power, and I representing the quality of the crop. -Echo. was surprised to hear such a proposition put forward. There is no more inherent power in the members of a club to alter their rules so as to expel one of its members against the wishes of the minority than there is in the members of any society or partnership which is founded on a contract, that written contract. of course, expressing the terms on which the members associate together; and it is intolerable to imagine that the majority should in such a case claim an inherent power of terday morning, and also sought an interview old members for misconduct previous to its adop- terviewed by an Advertiser reporter, who asked -tion would be void on the ground of its being in- him if he had any statement to make with reconsistent with the centract contains in the gard to the ramours current about the threatenoriginal rules, it seems necessarily to follow that: it is impossible to give effect to any rule relating to expulsion so as to bring about a similar breach of contract. Rale 49 must. therefore either the construed as not anplying to the past conduct of the plaintiff, or it must be rejected as ultra vires and, in either event, the plaintiff is entitled to succeed. In the construction of contracts there is a well-known rulo that where a clause is susceptible of two meanings it must be understood rather in that arms, anyway?" by which it will have some effect than that by which lit cannot have any, and I think that this principle applies to make the language of rule 40 effective as reand obligations of membership.
